The Marlow Club is a private health and fitness club, which has been transformed over the last three years. The brief was to redevelop and revitalize the existing facilities and create an interior scheme for the fit-out of a new extension.

The contemporary extension, designed by Scottish Architects Crearar Associates, included a 20m heated indoor swimming pool, sauna, steamroom, external terracing/sundeck and a circulation foyer connecting the new and existing spaces.

The architecture minimizes the boundaries between the interior environment and the surrounding terraced / landscaped areas. We designed a bold and vibrant scheme in the pool and fitness areas to enhance the natural daylight, which forms an energetic space where the members exercise. This creates a contrast with the relaxing scheme in health suite and members' bar.

Our design interventions have carefully matched the clients' wish for continual improvements against a carefully staged capital expenditure. All this was achieved on time, whilst still maintaining a fully operational facility, with minimal disruption for the existing club members.
